Chestnut Trees Are Disappearing

This Generation Witnesses the Extinction of a Great and Numerous Species of Trees—65,000,000 Acres of Chestnut Forest Doomed.

One famous American tree was not placed under the mantle of conservation during American Forest Week. Nobody said a word in behalf of the chestnut, and that was because after a lapse of many years no means has been found of saving the native chestnut forests from extinction by Nature's death sentence. They are as much doomed to death as the condemned man on his way to the scaffold. Thirty-five million acres of chestnut trees—almost a tenth of the present American forested area—are being irresistibly destroyed by the chestnut blight. The blight is merciless and all the science and cunning of man avail nothing against it.

In ten years, says the Research Bureau of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, citing the U. S. Forest Service as its authority, the infection will be practically complete and in fifteen years there will be little or no sound chestnut left. This is not mere forest wrecking, it is actual eradication forever of a once innumerable species. Old men will live to boast that they beheld a live chestnut tree. The extinction of the chestnut will be the most impressive obliteration of a line of life since the disappearance of the passenger pigeon.

So, instead of urging the conservation of chestnut, foresters are preaching its utilization with all possible speed, with no thought whatever for replacement or reproduction. Speed is necessary, for the wood of a blight-killed chestnut tree begins to deteriorate about a year after death. If the tree is left longer than two years the sapwood begins to decay, but the heartwood still remains sound and suitable for a great number of uses. In the next stage the heartwood begins to dry out and check. It within six years the tree is not cut and taken from the woods, the heartwood becomes infected with decay and then the tree is useless for practically all purposes except wood extract and fuel.

According to a bulletin issued by the Forest Products Laboratory there are 200 specific uses for chestnut wood, and the obliteration of chestnut forests of imperial extent will not only make a ghastly hole in American forests but will be a serious blow to industry.

Among the principal uses of chestnut are poles and posts, railroad ties, boxes and crates, furniture core stock, slack cooperage, furniture and millwork, rough construction, tannin, and somewhat for pulp wood.

Manufacturers of products to which chestnut is suitable are urged by the Forest Products Laboratory to give all possible consideration to its use at the earliest possible moment, for after fifteen years practically all of this species then remaining—dead or dying—will be of little use except for extract and fuel. Prompt use means the utilization of an immense amount of forest wealth which otherwise will completely dissolve in the near future.

Synthetic Silk

Spruce logs floated in at one end of a factory come out at the other end in the form of artificial silk, strands of glossy yarn that are shipped to all points throughout the country. The wood pulp covers five cents a pound while the synthetic silk sells for $2 a pound, and more than that when purchased in the form of neckties, shirts, sweaters and stockings for both men and women.

Kumud From Seals

A gelatinous substance produced by some of the larger varieties of seals is being used as a substitute for Japanese lacquer in decorating boxes, vases and imitation antiques. It is said to resist age and give a brilliant surface when hard. It is also well suited to dyeing while in a soft state and only experts are said to be able to tell it from the more costly Oriental substances.

DAILY EGG LIKEWISE KEEPS DOCTOR AT BAY.

Ithaca, N. Y., April 29.—An egg a day is advised for every person over one year of age by nutrition specialists at the state college of home economics here. "Eggs," they say, "are one of the most valuable sources of iron, which is necessary for good blood. As iron is not stored in the body, a supply should be taken in food every day, and one egg will furnish ten per cent of the required amount. Eggs are also a fairly good source of lime and phosphorus, two other minerals needed by the body for good bones and teeth."

Properly cooked eggs are easily digested and for both children and adults they are a good source of protein, the substance which is used to build the flesh and also the blood. "With young children care should be taken not to feed too much of the white of the egg. This particularly applies to the uncooked white, which is digested with difficulty. The white of an egg should always be cooked until it is opaque. For children under one year the egg yolk alone is advised. This is an excellent way to give iron to a baby, as practically all the iron in an egg is contained in the yolk."

Recent experiments indicate that, with the exception of cod liver oil, eggs are probably the best source of the food factor which prevents rickets.

In cooking eggs, high temperatures make them tough and leathery. "Soft" eggs or poached eggs should be cooked at a temperature just below the boiling point, and all dishes in which eggs are the main ingredient should be cooked at a low temperature.

Big Changes in 1927 Legislature

Senator Downing, Democratic Leader of Upper House, is Not Expected to Return—After G. O. P. Leader, May Not Return.

Albany, April 29.—The complexion of the 1927 legislature, so far as individual members are concerned, will be greatly changed, but Republicans are confident their party will retain control both houses.

Less than two weeks have elapsed since the 1926 session completed its work and yet the Capitol already is wondering about the leadership in the two houses next year.

Senator Bernard Downing, the Democratic leader of the upper house, is not expected to return to the senate. He is slated, it is said, to receive the appointment to an important in the New York city administration.

Senator Thomas I. Sheridan of New York, is considered the most likely Democratic member of the upper house, as successor to Downing. Report has it, however, that Senator Nathan Straus, Jr., millionaire New Yorker, who has been a member of the senate for several years, would like to become the Democratic leader in the senate.

Up-state Democrats also have a candidate in the person of Senator William T. Byrne of Albany, for the post of Democratic leader in the upper house of the legislature. Senator Byrne is the only Democratic member of the upper house outside of those elected from Greater New York. He has served two terms and his friends are confident he will be re-elected this fall.

There is much speculation as to what will happen in the assembly in the event that Simon L. Adler of Rochester, for years the G. O. P. floor leader, does not return to the legislature. In the event that a new federal court district is created in western New York, Adler is slated for the post of federal judge, according to his friends at the Capitol. In the event that Adler is named a federal judge, it is expected there will be a hot fight between Assemblyman Hutchinson of Fulton-Hamilton, at present chairman of the ways and means committee, and Assemblyman Jenks, Broome, for the post of Republican floor leader. Many observers at the Capitol are inclined to think that Hutchinson will win out over Jenks.

Assemblyman Maurice Bloch of New York will lead the Democratic forces in the lower house again next year.

INTERESTING OTTERS

"I am an interesting animal," said the Otter.

If you are an interesting animal," remarked Mrs. Otter, "then what about me?"

"You are interesting, too," said Mr. Otter, "simply because you are an otter."

"Well, that is a good reason," said Mrs. Otter. "It's well to be interesting because one is what one is and not because one is something different."

"There, there, careful, careful," said Mr. Otter. "Don't get all mixed up in your talk."

Mrs. Otter smiled. "I like to know I am interesting," said she.

"But," she added, "will you please give me some of the reasons?"

"It's always a good plan to know why one is interesting."

"For example, someone might come up to me and say:

"Mrs. Otter, I hear you are interesting."

"But will you tell me why you are interesting?"

"It would be quite too horrible for words if I could not answer."

"In the first place," said Mr. Otter, "we wander and have adventures."

"They find it hard to keep us in the zoo, for we are so apt to climb over our bars and get away—not because we are not happy here, for we are.

We are tame and fond of the keeper."

"It's our nature to wander."

"But alas and alack! Many a poor otter has wandered to his doom!"

Mrs. Otter shed a tear, wiped her eyes with her best front paw, and Mr. Otter continued.

"But when we are free we have many a jolly time as children would have," and Mrs. Otter began to smile again.

"Often we give sliding parties just as children would give sliding parties for themselves and each other."

"I have been on many a sliding party myself," said Mrs. Otter.

"Ah yes, we would slide down a nice muddy or slippery hill, usually into some water below."

"We would give a sliding party, as a rule, where there was water at the foot of a hill."

"We would do the same," said Mr. Otter.

"Well do I remember the hunting parties we would have for fish, frogs and small creatures."

"I believe they are very useful and also very tame."

To His Wife

You make me do what you will; you have full sovereignty here, and I award you with all my heart the command in all household matters, reserving my rights in other points. Never any good came out of female domination. God created Adam master and lord of all living creatures; but Eve spelt all when she persuaded him to eat himself above God's will. To you women with your tricks and guiles that lead men into error—beware.

The Medium's Request

"Right," murmured the medium, "you there? If so, rap once. If not, twice."—London Daily Express.

Cottonseed Important

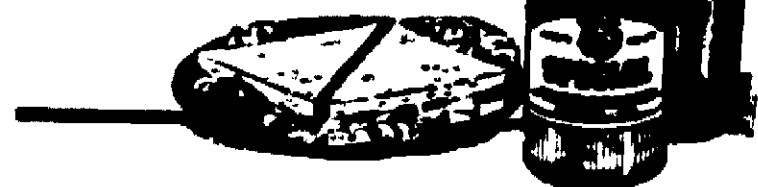

For decades cottonseed was a waste product. Today cottonseed is one of the nation's foremost food and feed products, furnishing vast quantities of meal for animals, with a result that cottonseed alone, apart from cotton lard, is exceeded in value by only seven American farm crops—corn, cotton lard, hay, wheat, white potatoes, oats and tobacco. Cottonseed has greater value than the combined barley, rye and buckwheat crops of America and twice the value of America's apple crop.

ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE

Supreme for a Generation

TWENTY-SIX years ago the first Packard car was built by a wealthy man for his own use. It was the finest car he knew how to build. Friends who wanted the best regardless of price ordered cars from him. So was a business born.

And that business, started as a rich man's hobby, has now grown to be the largest builder of truly fine cars in all the world.

For as the public has learned to use sound business judgment in buying motor cars, Packard volume has grown, costs have been lowered, and the saving resulting from vastly increased production passed on to Packard buyers.

Packard cars of today are finer cars by any standard of comparison than Packard ever built before. Yet they cost far less than the Packards of even ten years ago.

Packard engineering supremacy has been proven again and again—on land, in the air, on the water. Packard beauty and distinction have been acclaimed and imitated the world around. Packard comfort and performance have been impressed by the most extraordinary tests.

And when Packard prices and Packard's liberal monthly payment plan are considered, it is not surprising that nearly twice as many Packard cars were sold last year as in 1924.

Pythian Knights
Phoenicia Night

Local Lodge Entertains Many Visiting Brothers and Nees Dearests. Conferred by Franklin Lodge—Veteran Knights Honored.

One of the largest fraternal meetings held in this section of the country in some time was held at Phoenicia on Monday evening, April 25, under the auspices of Shandaken Lodge, No. 258, Knights of Pythias. There were one hundred and thirty-four brave Knights present, there being large delegations present from the following lodges:

William B. Gale Lodge of Boston, Mass., being represented by Brother Van Tassel of Kingston, N. Y.

Franklin Lodge of Kingston conferred the rank of Page on seven candidates, this work being put on in a very impressive and beautiful manner and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

During the evening seven Past Chancellors of Shandaken Lodge were honored by receiving handsome jewels, these being given as a token of appreciation by the members of the lodge for services rendered by these Past Chancellors during their terms of office. Those so honored were: Andrew DuBois, Flavius Dible, Albert Hommel, R. B. Longyear, James Townsend, William P. Malloy, H. O. Crosby. Supreme Representative Palmer Canfield made the presentation speech, having journeyed all the way from Washington, D. C. to do so. He emphasized the necessity of Past Chancellors co-operating with the present leadership of Shandaken in order that the lodge may have the benefit of their experience and ability.

Another important event of the evening was the honoring of eight members of Shandaken Lodge who have been members of the order for twenty-five years or more by presenting them with beautiful twenty-five year "veterans' jewels." S. R. Palmer Canfield also made these presentations with a few well-fitting remarks, closing the same by saying that he would consider it an especial honor and privilege to be present, if possible, and present fifty-year jewels to all these Veterans of Pythian Knighthood when they have reached that length of service. Those so honored were: Charles W. Galway of Lewisburg, Pa.; Edward Rowe, E. B. Hiseley, Gilbert Braxer, James Townsend, Stanford Niece, John Haisenberg, Henry W. Rogers. By this time most of these twenty-five year veterans were seated down to partake of a delightful supper. When all had fed the inner man to a satisfying degree, Chancellor Commander Karl Schwarzwald of Shandaken Lodge presented Franklin Lodge with a nice travel in appreciation of the fine work done for the local lodge in conferring the first rank. Chancellor Commander Schwarzwald, to whom a great deal of credit is due for this successful meeting, then called upon the chancellor commanders of their respective lodges—Brother Shults of Franklin, Brother Woodworth of Ontario, Brother McClary of North American and Brother Spinneweb of Hope Lodge all responded in a very creditable manner, interspers-ing their remarks with good humor and sound advice. The Hon. John E. Kirt of Kingston was the next speaker who quickly made his presence felt by the very eloquent manner in which he pleaded for a more practical application of Pythianism.

Supreme Representative Palmer Canfield responded once more in his usual forceful style with a speech which commanded the attention of all, after which Assistant Deputy Grand Chancellor Edgar Hallock of Poughkeepsie gave some excellent advice to the lodges present regarding their work and influence. Brother Hallock made himself very agreeable by telling some very funny stories to illustrate his points and his speech sent everyone away with a song in the heart and a real Pythian smile on the face.

All the Pythian brothers departed to their homes feeling that April 25 of this year marked the beginning of a new era in Pythian activity in this region, which it is hoped will eventually bring into the order all men who believe in God, in the United States of America, and in the brotherhood of man.

Natty
Natural History

By RUGH HUTTON.

THE BOSNIAN DOOK.

This graceful creature has often been observed by gipsies in southern Bosnia gaily hopping about from hollyhock to hollyhock, sipping the nectar from the blossoms with all the deftness of the humming bird. It is not a humming bird, however, and is thought to be a distant relative of the kangaroo, although the distance is great. It is due to the bounding movement of the dook that the famous gipsy dance, the Przemysl Praszchivski, originated, and the honey it stores in its cave furnishes the natives with their main article of diet.

The body of the dook is an almond, the legs are peanuts and the feet split lima beans. The nose, legs and neck are cloves, and the beak is a toothpick. The head might as well be a navy bean as anything, but the ears are split peanut kernels. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service.) (Tomorrow—The Fobbed Skeel.)

American Cuckoos
The blackbill and yellowbill cuckoo occur commonly in summers throughout the United States and eastern Canada, but pass the winters in Central or South America. The blackbill cuckoo does not occur west of the Rocky mountains in midyear. The yellowbill cuckoo is known as the rain crow. Its note is supposed to predict rain.

LAST NIGHT
or THE RADIO

Fat fryers were busy from 9:00 to 10:40 and from 10:45 to 10:50. They put the WJW Rochester center out of business but didn't get quite early enough to turn the old songs from WJZ.

The electrical apparatus that catches fat frying noises sends them out on a wave length—not a sharp defined wave length such as broadcast use, but a wave length just the same. These noises are usually most intense at about 400 meters and spread from 60 to 80 meters on each side. So there's usually a way to beat the fat fryers by tuning in extremely short or extremely long wave lengths. Often WOC of KDKA will come in clearly when WGY and WJZ are completely submerged.

Last night it was among the short waves that one could successfully seek solace. WSMG, WHAP, WGBR, WBBM and WJH were received perfectly while the fat was frying furiously higher on the dial. For the DX fans, KSD and KFTO alternately occupied the St. Louis wave length. KFTO is a Lutheran college and their chorus last night surely could sing. KPRU, WGO, WOC, KYW, WJR, WJAZ and WLV were also specially appreciated among those who were present.

"Senator Ford of Michigan," Johnster at WJZ, has it all over "Judge, Jr."

Have the bloopers reformed? They were few last night.

Democrats As Usual Disagree

Placid Stream of Local Democracy
Appears to be Somewhat Rotted—
Secretary Dunn Wants to Know—
Planning Raid on Water Board.

There appears to be an under-current of unrest that is roiling the
placid stream of local Democracy,
which is expected to boil up at the annual meeting of the board of water commissioners in June when local Democracy is planning to stage a raid and oust all of the present
water board officials and install deserving Democrats in their stead at the city hall.

The first symptom of unrest came to the surface several days ago when it is understood that Lucullus E.
Dunn, recently appointed secretary of the municipal civil service commission, and also secretary of several other organizations, served notice on the board of public works that he would refuse to okay and sign the board's payroll until he was officially notified as to why some of the men on the payroll were paid $3.25 per day and others $3.50.

The explanation, of course, is too simple to be grasped by a Democrat, but is due to the fact that several years ago the street force petitioned the board of public works for an increase in wages, citing the high cost of living as the reason for the demand. At that time the board, after considerable discussion, decided to grant the request by allowing the men on the street force who did the arduous work $3.50 a day while the street sweepers were granted a wage scale of $3.25, as the board believed that was sufficient pay for that class of work. As none of the sweepers threw up the job the natural inference is that they were satisfied with the increase granted them.

At that time the civil service
board was notified of the new wage scale, a fact evidently overlooked by the present secretary of the board unless some of the leaders, or would-be leaders, of local Democracy are trying to stir up discontent and picked out Mr. Dunn to fire the opening gun.

A member of the civil service
board when questioned as to Secretary Dunn's ultimatum to the board of public works, stated it was "news to him." He said that the civil service board was aware of the wage scale at the time it went into effect.

As Mayor Morris Block is president of the board of public works there is considerable speculation as to why the opening gun in the campaign of unrest was directed at that board—not only aimed but fired by one of his appointees.

Those who claim to be in "the know" say that it was but the first step preliminary to staging a big drive on the board of water commissioners who hold their annual meeting and election of officers in June in an effort at that time to have the board remove the present paid officials of the board and install some deserving Democrats in their stead.

There seems, however, to be some grave question as to whether those planning the raid can induce the members of the water board to play politics with them. Of late years the members of the board have not played politics but appointed those who they deemed best fitted to carry on the work irrespective of party affiliation. That, of course, is one of the reasons why the water department is the only city department that is self supporting.

Sweet Pea an Importation

The sweet pea is a native of the island of Sicily and was first mentioned in 1695 by an Italian monk,
who sent seeds to England and Holland. The seeds of sweet peas became an article of commerce as early as 1724. Sweet peas have been grown for more than a century in America,
and all of the varieties known in Europe were grown here. There was a wave of popularity for the sweet pea in America between 1885 and 1900, while the tide, which received its great impetus through the introduction of the waded, or Spencer, type, was just beginning to rise at the sweet-pea celebration in London in 1900.

Early Canal Building

More than four centuries ago the Chaldeans showed surprising energy in canal building, having dug not one but many for irrigation purposes, a list of which has been preserved. It is evident that the Chaldeans took their canals seriously. A relief has been unearthed showing an early king named Ur-Engur, with the monarch in an attitude of adoration before the Moon god, which is seated, while an angel flying down from above holds in its outstretched arms a vase from which pour streams of water. The picture is repeated several times, and it is believed that an angel symbolizes each of the principal canals.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

I have noticed that every man who really amounts to a good deal is prompt; he makes few appointments and keeps them. And when he works, he works. But look out for the man who loafs half the time during his business hours, and is never on time.

I frequently hear men tell jokes and there is that merry twinkle in their eyes which the newspapers say denotes a good one. Still, the joke is dull as ditch water; if I haven't heard it, I'm sorry I did.

Writers have a high opinion of their calling. I do not share it. I believe business men are sadder, more useful, and more intelligent.

All things are tried out in the crucible of business, which includes experience, accomplishment, science.
If a certain formula will not work,
practical men abandon it, and try something else. Thus all good results have been accomplished.

But writers are never discouraged;
today they demand the same impossible things their brethren demanded centuries ago.

I lately met an old fellow on a railroad train, and heard him talking to some of the other men in the smoking room. "I have nothing to do but read," he said, "but am not enjoying myself much. When I was active, and out in the world, I heard the men say better things than I meet with in books. Incidents actually happening in my daily life were more interesting than the plots I see worked out in books or the movies."

I was calling the other evening, but dejected when I caught the hostess, a very polite woman, yawning. She did it as amiably as was possible, but I caught her, and relieved her at the first evidence of distress. A polite woman is a great work of art; I like that woman for trying to hide her disposition to yawn.

I have noticed that when I have much to do, I yawn openly and unabashedly.
But under similar circumstances a woman will yawn behind her hand or fan.
... God bless the ladies.

When I am introduced to a stranger,
the stranger usually asks me, "What do you do?" I answer, "I am a writer." And then I see him get going at it.

BLAME BEE FAMINE FOR FRUIT FAILURE.

Entomologist From Cornell Says Many
Orchards Not Cross-Pollinated Well
Because of Few Insects.

Ithaca, N. Y., April 25.—"Too few bees for cross-pollination may cause fruit crop failures," says Professor Joseph Oskamp, of the State College of Agriculture here. "A bee famine in the fruit sections of New York state is causing much trouble in the proper setting of fruit. Most growers have taken it for granted that the small size of individual bees and the large number of individuals grown amply provide for crosspollination, but fewer insects, especially bees, seem to be the limiting factor for better fruit crops."

Professor Oskamp goes on to explain how the grower can find out if he is losing money because of poor cross-pollination.

"Where blocks of trees of one variety are persistently uniform, although they blossom full, lack of cross-pollination is apt to be the cause," he says. "Factors enter in that when a conclusion would not be justified without more scientific evidence. A simple experiment will tell the grower the fact."

"First, place a hive in the center of a block of trees. Second, wait ten days or about two weeks, and then inspect the blossoms. If the blossoms are in the same stage of development and packed them in a solid wall, the bees have done their work. If the blossoms are in different stages, and the bees have been there, and the trees are in different stages, the fact of cross-pollination is the limiting factor in that orchard and the grower should top-work every fourth tree in every fourth row, and so on, until the bees are in a position to do their work properly."

Molyneux Models Are Interesting

Leading Designer Retain Low Waistline Which He Introduced.

The intrepid captain who designed the famous Lido promenade pyjama several seasons ago has become an institution in the Paris couture, and the Molyneux collection is generally looked to as one of the most authoritative in France. Which adds significance to Captain Molyneux's discarding of the gaudy lure and his return to a comparatively straight silhouette for spring and summer. He modifies the straight line, however, notes a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, to present-day requirements by the clever introduction of flat pleats, which give Madame all the freedom she needs. And he retains the rather low waistline which he himself introduced.

His morning frocks and coats are carried out chiefly in navy blue or beige with an occasional red or green model just to give variety. For them he uses kasha, fresco, jersey, crepe marocain, serge, tweed, poplin, reps and a new wool fabric exclusive to this house and known as Molyneux. Some coats are trimmed with fur, and Molyneux has a decided preference for fox dyed to match the fabric that it trims.

The afternoon gowns and ensembles have distinction and are very wearable. Printed crepe de chine and chiffons predominate, especially those in which a note of black is introduced, and they are rendered all the more useful by the addition of a plain black coat lined with some other color appearing in the design. Thin flower patterns and pretty arrangements of polka dots are the most favored designs. Dresses have little scarfs and ties. Coats are straight and sometimes have plaits inset under pockets or adjusted with points. One amusing gown in red and black printed crepe de chine has a harem skirt which seems a decided novelty to our unaccustomed eyes.

As usual, the lace gowns for race and garden-party wear are delightful, and there is a charming model in the periwinkle blue, which Molyneux was the first to use, that is carried out in broderie anglaise and worn with a georgette coat to match.

The pyjamas are exotic and elaborate in satin, brocade, georgette and lace. Their new note is a strap under the bust which gives a neat fit to the close-clinging trousers.

Fringe is an outstanding feature of the evening dresses. Captain Molyneux is fond of the swing and the grace it lends to a gown of simple lines. Wing draperies that sway out from under the arms are also much in favor. Flowered chiffons form some of the prettiest models and sometimes they are enriched with sequin embroidery, which is applied in masses.

DAINTINESS IS THE KEY TO SUMMER SUCCESSES IN DANCE-FROCKS—NET HANKS NEXT TO CHIFFON AND LACE

Paris continues to tempt us with beautifully patterned chiffons and even goes to the length of exploiting them for summer dance frocks. The Southern season on this side of the Atlantic did little to encourage this mode, the preference being usually for plain chiffons or for such as were beaded or in some way elaborated upon other than by printing. Hand-painting is one of the media employed, of course, and the introduction of lace applied in some instances so that it appears to be embroidery is another way of trimming.

The "ruffy-ruffie" type of costume is one of immediate interest. This one has a ruffled cape as well.

It is pretty generally agreed that women, no matter how severely tailored they like to be by day, enjoy flaunting femininity at night. This seems demonstrated by the increasing success of gowns not only of chiffon but of tulle, dainty frocks which are not only shaggy with handkerchief points but affluted with petals or billowy with ruffe. All this is in tune with the animated silhouette—and in keeping with the fast pace and whirl of life. The fluttering cape is quite in harmony with all this movement and is often a part of the gown itself, while every little dance frock has a cape all its own, or if not a cape a shawl of one sort or another. Embroidered net shawls are dainty to a degree, and one, of course, realizes the charm of novelty lace ones.

Among the newer scarfs are those which are of accordion pleated chiffon so that taken one consideration with another, we seem to be in for a summer of daintiness and allure, parasols contribute their mite of coquetry toward the general impression of frivolity. While the combination of chiffon and lace, and each of these materials separately are first choice for evening, the net or tulle gown has a rather general appeal. Colorful Blouses Worn With Sedate Tailcoats

There is nothing sadder about the newly arrived tailored suit for spring, even when it appears in the popular black or navy. A gay silk blouse lends it a vivid color note. Here is one of peach damask with collar and cuffs of olive cloth.

Gray Is Favorite for Spring Cape or Coat

Gray for spring is the latest fashion ruling. On all sides one sees unmistakable evidence that gray in all its tones, from the palest silver to a deeper shade of stone, is destined to play a part of exceptional importance in the fashions of the new season.

It is perhaps more in vogue and has than the popularity of gray in shown. Gray coats are legion and they are amazingly distinctive and smart. The topcoat of gray tweed patterned in small decorative designs of geometric inspiration, which is distinguished by the new flaring line from the shoulder, has many advocates, while its rival in interest is the cape coat or the long cape, gathered or circular, according to individual preference.

Any number of different interpretations of the cape coat are shown. In some cases the cape just covers the shoulders. In others it reaches well below the knees, while a third type suggests a cape in the shaped pieces which extend from each side of the back over the shoulders.

BRONZE MEDALLION OF JAMES SMITHSON

Believed to Be Work of Famous Artist.

From a Washington dealer in antiques the Smithsonian Institution of Washington has unexpectedly obtained an excellent bronze medallion, probably executed by the famous Italian sculptor, Antonio Canova, of its founder, the English scientist, James Smithson. On the back is the rough inscription, "James Smithson, 1817." The medallion bears an initial letter, evidently of the artist who made it, which seems to be an old-fashioned "C."

A plan is under consideration to have bronze replicas of this medallion made for presentation of all persons who respond to the Smithsonian Institution's appeal for funds in its effort to add $10,000,000 to its endowment—the first appeal it has made for financial aid since it was founded with money left in trust to the United States by Smithson just 100 years ago.

Bel P. Tolman, assistant curator of graphic arts of the Smithsonian Institution, who has charge of the personal relics of Smithson, has written to a man in Italy, author of a life of Canova, in an effort to discover whether the famous Italian sculptor ever made a medallion of Smithson. It is considered to be quite likely that he did, for Canova and Smithson were contemporaries and the English scientist spent much of his time in Italy, where he died.

Mr. Tolman is taking nothing for granted, however, especially in view of the fact that the single letter on the medallion may possibly be a "T."

He wrote to a museum at Copenhagen and inquired about the possibility of the medallion having been executed by Albert Thorwaldsen, a Danish sculptor of the same period, who did much of his work in Italy. A reply came that it is not the work of Thorwaldsen.

A curious circumstance in connection with the discovery of the medallion is that among the relics of Smithson in the possession of the Smithsonian Institution is a die of the same medallion, with no inscription on it. The late Prof. S. P. Langley, third secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, in his life of Smithson, wrote:

"We have a likeness of him taken from a medallion executed probably in the years when he was most active in these scientific labors. The precise date of the medallion . . . is unknown."

The dealer in antiques says he obtained the medallion from a collector of old coins. How it came into his possession is a mystery. There is a record of such a medallion once having been in the possession of the Smithsonian Institution, but it was long ago.

The medallion is an artistic piece of work and resembles the work of Canova. Replicas of it would have artistic value and historical interest.

Ink Blots for Mind Tests

Ink blots will tell more about your personality in ten minutes than hours of analysis, according to a professor of Northwestern University.

You can test yourself with a sheet of paper and splashes of red, green or black ink. Ask yourself what you see in them. If they appear merely as blots you are of the conventional type. If, however, you see in them fantastic and original pictures, then you belong to a creative type above the average.

For some time, says the Popular Science Monthly, psychologists have been using ink blots in this way to study personality, with some excellent results.

Enthusiastic Over Gas

"What use of wealth so luxurious and delightful as to light your house with gas," wrote Sydney Smith in 1821. "What folly to have a diamond necklace of a Coraggio, and not to light your house with gas! The splendor and glory of Lambton hall makes all other houses mean. How pitiful to submit to a farthing candle existence, when science puts such masses of gratification within your reach! Dear lady, spend all your fortune in a gas apparatus. Better to eat dry bread by the splendor of gas, than to dine on wild beef with wax candles."

Bound Not in Demand

Very few Scottish deerhounds have been introduced into the United States and little has been done to establish the breed. This is easy to understand, inasmuch as our laws do not permit the hunting of antelope game with dogs, and our carnivorous big game demand dogs of a heavier and more aggressive nature than these fleet chasers of the Highlands. The deerhound is said to make a wonderful companion.

Canary Bird's Ears

Although quite sensitive, the canary bird's ears, located just back of and a little below the eyes, appear to be only a small opening into the head. The ear is not hard to find, when it is known where to look for it. It has always been a scientific mystery that birds have such acute hearing when they have such small assistance from nature in the way of ears to "catch" up sounds.

DOLLING UP THE HUMBLE POTATO

Four Unusual Recipes by Four Famous Cooks

Don't think that after you've served potatoes mashed, creamed, and fried you've put them through all their paces. You don't have to begin repeating the old story. There are many delightful ways of preparing the humble spud, as several famous cooks have discovered. They actually glorify this homely American vegetable!

Tamalpais Potatoes

Tamalpais Potatoes. Doesn't the very name make your mouth water? This delicious dish, prepared from left-over potatoes, is a favorite with Mrs. Belle De Graf, San Francisco home economics counselor and writer.

Cut up fine 3 cups cold boiled potatoes. Add ½ cup of cream, and salt and pepper to taste. Pack very solidly in buttered custard cups, or muffin pans. Set in a pan in a very hot oven. Bake 20 minutes, or until golden brown crust has formed which will hold the potatoes together. Turn out in individual molds.

Baked Potato "Tips"

Mrs. Sarah T. Rorer, Philadelphia cooking expert, adds two or three artful touches to baked potatoes which make them taste unusually good.

"After scrubbing large, perfect potatoes, I soak them an hour in cold water," she says.

"I bake them on the upper grate of a medium oven, and turn them after 20 minutes. I let them bake another half hour, or until they feel soft when pressed in a napkin.

"Never try them with a fork, for this allows the steam to escape and makes them heavy. Serve in a napkin at once.

"The secret of good baked potatoes is a slow oven; for a hot oven hardens the skin at once and makes the potatoes soggy."

Stuffed and Browned

Miss Margaret Allen Hall, nutrition expert at the Battle Creek College of Home Economics, has a decided preference for stuffed potatoes. She fixes them like this:

4 medium-sized potatoes
½ cup milk or cream
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt

Select well-shaped potatoes about equal size. Bake until soft, then cut or break each potato at about the middle. Remove the contents, wash, add salt, butter, and sufficient cream or milk to cause the potato to heat up light. When very light, fill same with the seasoned potato, plugging it up in irregular shape. Set the stuffed potatoes in even a few minutes to brown.

in Pittsburgh

Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn, home economics director of Los Angeles, makes cooking to 1000 women every year. Her Pittsburgh Potatoes are rich enough to serve as the only cooked vegetable dish, she says. It served with a good salad they provide a delicious meal. Here is her recipe:

1 lb. potatoes
1 cup grated cheese
1 diced onion
½ cup bread crumbs
4 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup milk
Salt and pepper

Dice potatoes and boil until soft. Put a layer of potatoes in baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese, onion, butter and chopped bread crumbs. Add another layer of potatoes and repeat with cheese and crumbs. Pour over the top one cup white sauce. Cover with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in oven until well browned on top.

Prepare the white sauce by melting the two tablespoons butter, and stirring in about ½ cup milk until thickened. Then add one cupful milk and salt and pepper.

Six famous cooking experts agree

Pacific Coast, Gulf of Mexico, New England, and Lake Michigan! Six of the country's foremost cooking experts have just completed a rigorous test of the Perfection Stove.

THEY used every method of cooking from frying to baking, and were enthusiastic about the Perfection. Read what they say:

"Whether I broiled steak or French-fried potatoes, the results were fine," says Mrs. Rorer, famous Philadelphia cooking teacher.

Crisp Waffles

"My waffles were light and beautifully brown," says Miss Allen, director of The Boston School of Cookery. "They cooked on a hot flame, with yellow tips 1½ inches high above the blue area."

"I found the Perfection so dependable," reports Mrs. DeGraf, home economics counselor. "I left a roast lamb in the oven for hours. The flame never wavered."

No Scouring Needed

"Eggs a la King and broiled tomatoes are delicious enough in themselves," affirms Miss Hall, nutrition expert, "but twice as delicious to the cook whose kettle bottoms need no scouring. Perfection's long chimneys burn every drop of oil before the heat reaches the cooking. No soot or odor."

Tested Cooking Ability

These are just a few comments made by the six experts, satisfied with only the best cooking equipment. They find the 1926 Perfection fulfills every cooking requirement.

What does it mean to you?—That when you buy a Perfection you get a stove with cooking ability tested and proved by experts.

About Spring Foot Weariness

Spring days are here. And feet that step along blithely in the morning are often dragging in the late afternoon.

Shoes can help a lot at this time of year, light flexible shoes that function with the feet instead of working against them. Here's a pair of modish pumps, for instance, that will keep your feet fresh all day long.

These attractive pumps fit comfortably and gracefully. Their natural lines, closely fitted heels, and nicely rounded toes all make your feet feel well and look trim.

The straps hold the foot back in the shoe and keep the toes from crowding. Buoyant support is afforded by snug, flexible arches.

Cantilever Shoe

For Men, Women and Children. Supports the Arch, with Flexibility. Widths, AAAA to E. Oxfords, $9.50 and $10. Pumps, $10 to $12.50.

One woman gained 15 pounds in five weeks and that's going fast enough for anyone.

Only 50 cents for 50 tablets, and if they don't put five pounds of flesh on a thin person in 30 days your druggist is authorized to hand you the money you paid for it.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

SCHOOL OF EXPERIENCE

HOWEVER well educated you may be when you turn your back on the old university walls, so proud of the degree you have won through intensive study, you will awaken later to a realization that there is yet another school in which you must prove your worthiness before you can attain substantial success.

You will find here no quiz-masters to sharpen your wits or stir your imagination; no great libraries with helpful books of reference to shed their illuminating suns on the darkened way; no maps or charts by which you can steer your course.

You are upon an uncharted sea and it remains for you alone to handle the wheel and find your way through opposing gales which have tricks of changing suddenly and beating against you with terrible force.

You must observe carefully and give close attention to what is before you, else you will be blown from your track upon hidden rocks, where thousands before you have been wrecked and lost.

Among these treacherous rocks are incivility, self-conceit, egotism, vanity, cynicism, selfishness, obstinacy, prejudice and unbelief, each one a wrecker of careers and a destroyer of happiness.

Only in the school of experience can you learn of the great dangers of these dreadful reefs and what course to take to avoid them.

If in the classroom of this school you are quick in perception, willing to bend your will to the master-mind, and eager to play your part like a sensible man or woman, notwithstanding the high esteem in which you hold yourself, you will find success quite ready to flit with you at every corner, and perhaps waiting for you at the doorway in the morning.

Even a few months in the school of experience teaches a very trenchant principle for judgment and action, if you have within you the proper qualities, consisting mainly of a uniform courtesy and an alacrity in obeying orders.

The man or woman who through perverseness declines to do these things may be counted to make a shipwreck of his or her life.

To step down from the pedestal of your own creation, may not be an easy thing to do, but as you gather experience you will find that if you intend to participate in the race with the efficient, it must be done.

THINGS EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW.

At the moment there is a bigger demand for navy blue frocks than for black. Women are more interested in frocks that introduce a note of cuffs and pipings, with the rose shades, flesh, beige and nude sponsored and with white also accented.

The popularity of the sheer frock combined with lace is reported. This combination is demanded for both afternoon and evening frocks, with monotone effects outstanding. The lace is used in flounces, sleeves, jabots, scarfs and handings. Black, beige and the rose tones are all mentioned as being well liked.

The scarf continues to be an important item as regards frocks, attached and separate from the frock. It is sometimes of such ample proportions that it takes on the aspect of a cape, after the popular Cherill model. Others are so fashioned that they slide through the girdle, with one side flying free.

Jabots are other salient features, and are presented in many versions, all adding to the general feminine appearance so important this season. In some instances the jabot is offered in double formation, the upper layer being in contrasting color, usually rose or flesh or navy or black. Jabots of this sort usually reach to the waistline or a point just above but there are others that stretch down the front of the frock, reaching to the very edge of the skirt.

Many examples of the waistline posed at the top of the hips are seen, the line usually marked by a belt, a fabric, leather, or metal belt being preferred. The belted line also contributes to achieving the desired silhouette so much talked about in the Paris openings. The combination of belted bodice and full skirt is especially graceful.

Please go on and on, some assert that there is no sign of a let-up. That women like the idea of the full skirt and that the pleated versions are demanded more than ever. Greater treatment. They add that for evening frocks, there is call for models featuring flying skirts and puffs, giving width and at the same time compressing a feeling of animation.

The volley ball team of the "Y" Men's Club defeated the Kiwanis Club team Wednesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. gym. The Kiwanis Club team was handicapped by the failure of one of their players, George Lowe, to show up until after the game was over. After the game the Kiwanians were the guests of the "Y" Men's Club at dinner. The Kiwanis team was composed of C. Baltz, B. Siskind, Dr. Julius Gifford, R. L. Marchant, while the "Y" men were represented by J. Scott, C. Craig, L. Finley, C. Welterstiel, J. H. Haulenbeck and Dr. Julius Gifford. Bob Murray acted as referee.

Next Wednesday at 5:30 the "Y" men team will play the volley ball team of the Rotary Club who have accepted their challenge. After the game next week the Rotary team will also be the guests of the club at dinner.

Through the efforts of Gerald Craig, chairman of the evening's program committee, the club had as their speaker Attorney Floyd W. Powell, who delivered a powerful address on "Service and Cooperation." Mr. Powell's address was thoroughly enjoyed by the members and guests and a rising vote of thanks was extended to him.

Roman Ruins and Lure of Provence

The Mistral That Blows and the Mistral Whose Verses Live—Churches and Churches, Fountains and Fountains, and the Grandeur of Avignon.

Avignon, Provence, France, April 11, 1926.

Does Provence mean to you a wind or a place? Well it is a land where you are never long away from the thought of both. The wind called the mistral blows over it with a steady gale sometimes, that gets on the nerves, and it was about a hundred years ago that Mistral the poet sang those songs of his loved Provence that linger in the hearts of the people like a religion. No man since Dante has written himself into life and memory of a race as he has. His verse was as simple as these simple lives, and underneath the homely aspects of toil, as perfect in beauty. Over all this lovely and changeable country for the past week I have been motoring with my friends.

Aries, Nîmes, Tarascon, Orange, St. Rémy—with dozens of small villages—bright sunny days, in which as in a kaleidoscope have flown vivid pictures of Roman remains, cathedrals of the middle ages, the great Rhone, the craggy mountains that wall in this land, rich farms, fruit, vineyards and orchards—land of fatness—but everywhere Mistral—sometimes the wind, but everywhere the poet. In Aries there is a museum in his memory, where there are collections of his works, manuscripts and books, pictures of him, of his early home, of all the things he wrote about, but especially a reproduction as far as possible, of the life of the peasants he immortalized. There behind glass, life-size groups of the people in their kitchens, with a perfect representation of the furnishing of that room which was the heart of the farmhouse there was a bedroom, with the mother and newly born child in the great bed, and figures representing the old custom of bringing to the baby symbolic offerings with the accompanying wish. One lady in the costume of Aries was offering an egg—"may his life be full as an egg"—another had a candle—"may he have the light of wisdom," and one had a match—"may he be straight as a match!" Various others were quite as apt and charming.

Tarascon was a disappointment, and we did not linger there. We who have known the immortal "Tartarin" and followed him through the books that chronicled his adventures, and loved him in all his brave doings, had expected quite unreasonably, that somehow, somewhere, Tarascon would reveal him, or at least have some traces of the representation of a fabulous beast—it looked like a cross between a turtle and a Pterodactyl, as we saw it reposing in the museum. At Aries—is no longer carried as it had been for centuries, in the annual procession. Perhaps they got tired of the ridiculous travelers had showered on their superstition since those imitable books, or perhaps the old relic of a heathen custom was thought no longer fitted to modernity, certain it is that for some years past the custom has been abandoned, and the Tarasconese seem to shy away from talk about it.

The Roman works still left in this province are amazing. In all countries of Europe it has seemed to conquerors easier, and somehow creditable to take the quarried marbles and statues from the antiquities they found, rather than quarry out new stones for their buildings, so that everywhere into palaces and churches are beautiful and quite incongruous pieces of beautiful stone carving, superb columns, with classic capitals, cornices, and bits of ornamental bas-relief used to complete the decoration of much later construction. Of course they did the same here, but now and then they left something of beauty in its entirety. At Nîmes, at Aries and at Orange we saw quite perfect Greek theatres, used later by the Romans—one at least, built by them, and now they are restored, so that the seats of stone circle round the arena in perfect condition. Here the bulls are bred, and kept half wild. They bring them in from the marshes, and corral them underneath in the great crypts in droves. A gentle people with a savage form of amusement.

The lure of Provence is not possible to convey in a short letter like this, nor can I speak of more than a bit of what was so interesting that we could hardly go to sleep at night for thinking about the day's trip. Here and there one notes the place one must return to—if not in the flesh then in the spirit. One such is Les Baux. You climb a winding road up among the Little Alps—"Petit Alps"—they call them, which are part of the barrier that runs from the North and West, and high above you see a fort on a crag, a peak. It is the strong hold in ruins of the old Prince of Orange. Straddling down from it precipitously is the tiny village of Les Baux. Houses with beautiful doors, walls, often with carvings in marble, remnants of dear little garden terraces, a gem of a little church, and everywhere climbing up and down steep and steep streets. It is mostly deserted, save for a few inhabitants, the Gypsies, and two little shops—four tourists are beginning to come here, and two artists have taken over old houses, and made them charming and comfortable. But the view! Just over distant peaks of mountains, and right below is a valley beyond, a place like a tiny Eden, where are the towers, and an old mill—for the olive that grows in profusion up the mountain sides.

Right down there, in that valley, where the sun is warm and the air is pure, with high walls, where if you find out about it, the farmer's wife will let you in with a key—a garden full of memories! It was the garden of the Princess of Orange—"La Reine Jeanne"—and it had four exquisite marble pavilions, one in each corner, only one of which still remains in its perfection, a thing of loveliness. It was to the great palace on the hill above that troubadours and trouveres came, and they held there the famous "Courts of Love", when poets contended with voice and wit for the prizes. All was to the glory of love! Often they descended to this lovely garden of the Princess, and there one can reconstruct the scene, cavaliers, minstrels, poets, beautiful ladies, all in the gorgeous costumes of the middle ages, wandering among flowers and fountains, their graceful grayhounds following, and the hawkers with bird on wrist.

Then there was St. Marie—doubly interesting because we had an adventure—and I count my day lost without at least one! To go there you have to motor about thirty miles out across what is called "The Camargue", which is the flat delta of the Rhone, a vast country, partly desert, and as you get nearer the sea, very marshy. As we approached a crossing of two great high roads, going at a good speed, we saw ahead, one of the huge two wheeled carts of the country, stopped in the middle of the crossing, while the carter, evidently was idling near a little house, by the roadside where an old woman was stooped over her weeding. As he saw us coming, he ran to get his mule out of the way, but the mule, probably having experience of his approaches, backed violently, and the back of the huge projecting cart whanged into us, knocking a hole in the side of the car at the rear, and we narrowly escaped being overturned into the ditch. Great outcries—a row at once between our chauffeur and the carter, and in the twinkling of an eye, we seemed right out in the desert to have collected a crowd—all vociferating, hurling French about like weapons! Two cars had driven up, and all the occupants were clustered about. At last things were righted, the carter had disgorged his name, and the name of his employer, and we were on our way. That old woman who had glanced up once, never stopped her weeding, and when we whirled off she was still bent there in her tiny garden! The French peasant to the life!

At St. Marie, is the church where the two Marys, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Salome, the mother of James and John, with their servant Sara, a black woman, all landed in their flight from the persecution in Judea. Lazarus, Martha, and Mary Magdalen are also said to have fled from that same persecution, landing in France, but the Bethany family went further inland. This great church here beyond the sea marshes was built to commemorate their holy presence. If you find yourself unable to believe the tale—and there are always people like that—the relics are kept in a chapel under the roof to prove it.

But bless me, here I have almost filled my space, and nothing of this grand old Avignon, the ancient seat of the Popes! The great Palace of the Popes rises above the ramparts like a giant fortress, which it is, and has now been turned into a museum. Restorations have made it almost as uninteresting as when it fell into the base hands of a barracks, but the vaulted ceilings, the carved arches and doorways, the huge rooms, help us to put back on the wall spaces the magnificent frescoes that once adorned them, and to re-people the vast interior with the regal pageantry that once filled it with life and color. The old walls or ramparts of the city, are very interesting, but as usual the hand of the restorer has not helped them. The modern repairs and renewals are obtrusively evident, but on the whole these walls are most striking as they circle the city. The old bridge, of which the song of our childhood was sung as we danced, is still in part standing out into the Rhone, which swirls at this season with terrific force against the abandoned outcrops. The old chaise ferry-boat goes pitching and swinging across the current, but our hearts still sing the old song, and in spirit we dance to the measure.

"Sur le pont, d'Avignon, tous le monde danse en rond!" A. L. P. S.

Men Most Curious

It is rather unfair to women as a sex that they have somehow achieved the reputation of being curious. For, as a matter of fact, men usually are far more bitten with curiosity than are their sisters and their wives, says L. Beaufoy in the London Mail. Walk along any street at any hour when road excavations are proceeding and marvels are doing mysterious things. You will at once perceive males of all ages, sizes and classes intensely watching operations which they must have witnessed scores of times previously. But you will not see a vestige of anything feminine.

Why Worry?

Lord Darling, a celebrated English barrister, was addressing the court when he became so engrossed in his case that he completely overlooked the fact that it was past time for adjournment. The court asked: "Mr. Darling, have you noticed the position of the hands of the clock?" Darling—Yes, sir; but with respect I see nothing to cause anxiety. They seem to me to be where they usually are at this time of the day.

Financial and Commercial

New York, April 29.—A brisk advance in prices of motor stocks today, following the two preceding rallies, brought prices of active stocks in this group 10 to 20 points above the low of last week, and spread consternation into the ranks of the badly trapped short interest. The oil and high-priced industrials were also prominent in today's advance, the latter gaining from 1 to 4 points.

General Motors resumed its place at the head of the forward movement in the industrial list and rushed up to above 135 for a gain of about 19 points from the low of last week. The financial district confidently expects an extra dividend disbursement to be ordered by the directors next month, in addition to the regular 7 per cent payment on the common stock.

The buoyant tone of the market was confined principally to the motors, oils and high-priced specialties. Merger talk linked up a few of the prominent oil companies and good demand continued for Skelly, Marland, Simms, Phillips, Shell, Union and other oils. Rails were lifeless, copper fairly active with good strength in American Smelting and Kennecott, sugars and equipments dull and generally heavy.

Dupont's five point rise to 221 1/2, up 3; General Electric's spurt to 329 1/2, up 6 and the further advance in United States Steel to 124 1/2, were the principal features of the industrial list. Buying was resumed in a few of the public utility and department store stocks, in which prices were moderately higher. Commodity markets were steady.

DAIRY FACTS

START DAIRYING IN SPRING BEST

When the grass turns green in the spring, farmers usually think more about live stock and, as a rule, most beginners in dairying start their new business during the early spring months, and there is very little doubt that the appearance of grass is an incentive to this line of thought and action, concluded J. P. LaMaster, chief of the dairy division at Clemson college.

A great majority of milk cows in the state freshen during the spring, which helps to produce interest in dairying at this season of the year, because when a surplus of milk is produced the farmer usually looks around for a market for this product. He soon realizes that with one to three cows he cannot expect any very great return, and therefore decides to add three or four more cows to his herd. In this way he grows into the dairy business, which is undoubtedly the very best policy. However, there are many reasons why it is best to have the dairy cows freshen in the fall, and for the same reason it is usually the best policy to start a new dairy business at that season of the year.

With the spring pastures there usually come certain noxious weeds, such as wild onions and bitter weed, which produce bad flavors and odors in the milk of cows which graze them. As yet no satisfactory method has been determined to eliminate these objectionable flavors from milk after it is drawn from the cow. The only way the farmer can control these flavors is to either destroy the weeds in the pasture or remove the cows from pastures infested with these weeds at least three hours before milking time. Sometimes green rye and oats pasture produce these bad flavors and odors in the milk. This can be controlled by the same procedure as outlined above.

Grain Mixtures Useful for Feeding the Calves

Brans and cracked corn make very good calf feed and whenever possible they should form the basis of the grain mixture. Ground oats are likewise good but, because they are usually high in price as compared with other farm grains, their use is not general.

Corn has a desirable effect on calves and to a certain extent replaces the butterfat removed from the milk. Many tests prove cracked more desirable than when finely ground. By the time a calf is two weeks old it will start nibbling grain if given a chance and at one month will eat half a pound a day. In case a mixture of feeds is desired there are several good ones.

1. Three parts cracked corn and one part wheat bran.
2. Three parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran and one part ground oats.
3. Three parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran, one part ground oats and one part oilmeal.
4. Five parts cracked corn, one part ground oats and one part blood meal.

Feed grain dry in troughs immediately after the calves have finished drinking their milk. Calves three months old will eat about three pounds of grain a day.

Balance Ration of Cows to Need of Individual

Because feed prices are lower than last year and butterfat prices somewhat higher, many dairymen are feeding more grain and purchased feeds than a year ago. Dairy division men at University Farm, St. Paul, Minn., say that the grain ration gives best results when fed according to the individual milk production of the cow.

When a good grade of roughage is available—and the cows should have all they can clean up—one pound of grain to each three to four pounds of milk produced will be sufficient. In a ration without clover or alfalfa hay, goodly quantities of feed rich in protein, such as, need meal, cottonseed meal or br., must be added in order to balance the ration to the needs of the animal.

Some Dairy Calf Dangers

The dairy calf cannot run with its mother on the clean pasture; the best calf can. The dairy calf must be weaned within a day or so after birth. When suckling its dam, the cow's udder and teats should best be kept clean so that the calf will not become infected with germs that might produce indigestion and diarrhea. Therefore, the cow and the calf should be kept in a clean place—away from filth, manure and infection.

Calves Without Milk

A dairy expert of the Missouri station says that dairy calves after they are three or four weeks old can be fed successfully without milk. He considers the lack of stimulus with many farms the chief obstacle to raising calves by hand, and finds that half meal, an substitute for milk, are being used extensively. "They are dairy satisfactory but are rather high in price as compared to better milk feed which will give equal and often superior results."

Will Plumbers Strike May 1?

The present wage scale agreement between the master plumbers and the local plumbing union expires Friday, and the local union has made a demand for an increase in wage of a dollar a day. They now receive $8 a day and demand $9 commencing Saturday, the first of May. It is stated that so far the majority of the master plumbers of the city have refused to sign the new wage scale agreement calling for a $5 day, and it is expected that the plumbers will strike Saturday unless the demand for a $5 day is met.

Critics Condemn
"The Breakdown"

London, April 29.—The influence of jazz upon modern youth, as depicted in a painting hung in this year's Royal Academy, has aroused a storm of controversy involving both art and ethics.

"The Breakdown" is the title of the painting, which has been executed by John B. Souter, a London artist, and it is easily the sensation
of the academy pre-review.

"The Breakdown" represents a dick-headed American Negro saxophonist playing jazz, while a proud, boyish figured, hubbed-hair dancing girl, who has discarded even her orange stockings and green jade slippers, dances madly. Wearing only green jade earrings the dancing girl's slim white body contrasts vividly with the coal black hue of the musician, who is pictured giving all his attention to his saxophone and none to the fair dancer, whose arms are lifted up in the wild abandon of the dance. In the background are the grey ruins of ancient classical statuary. The Negro music sits on what is said by some to be the broken statue of an Augustan soldier, while others maintain that it is a broken figure of Britannia.
The discarded clothing of the girl dancer is thrown carelessly over the broken statuary.

Those who have seen the picture
in the pre-view are inclined to condemn it as "too jazzy" to be shown along with royal portraits and other more sombre works. In the exhibition, others criticize the work as verging too close to the racial question, while Souter's defenders maintain that he has caught the spirit of jazz, rendering in paint the abandon of modern syncopation.

Humming Bird No Singer

The humming bird has powerful muscles which drive the wings in rapid vibrations. These vibrations cause the humming sound. Most of the hummers have no song, their only notes being querulous squeaks of wrath or fear. A few of the tropical forms, nevertheless, are said to be slightly musical. The humming bird is the smallest of birds, and when stripped of its feathers is not larger than a bumblebee.

Angora Goats

As a rule Angora goats are small,
weighing from 80 to 100 pounds.
Sometimes in the United States they weigh as much as 140 pounds, with an occasional one even heavier than this. Both males and females usually have horns and beards. The fleece weighs from 3 to 12 pounds.

Successful Whaler
The Britishwhaling industry reached its zenith at the end of the Eighteenth century; since that time whaling has been very largely in the hands of Scandinavian and American whalers. One of the biggest catches ever recorded was that secured, just over a hundred years ago, by a Scots whaler, which landed blubber and whalebone to the value of £11,000. At today's prices the whalebone alone would have realized not less than £120,000!
